2015 was a transformative year. We changed our corporate identity from Virginia Baptist Homes to LifeSpire of Virginia. We lowered our deficit and made effective strides toward a balanced budget. We provided support totaling roughly $1,100,000 to 60 residents across all four communities. Through it all, LifeSpire’s residents, donors, and staff modeled servant leadership, acts of selflessness, and community service. From volunteering at local churches and hospitals to delivering Meals on Wheels, LifeSpire’s residents, donors, and staff inspire me. I am truly thankful to be a part of the LifeSpire family, making Virginia a better place to live, work, and retire.

— Jonathan Cook, LifeSpire President and CEO

“For more than 70 years, LifeSpire of Virginia has remained true to our long-standing tradition of excellence and innovation—a tradition propelling us forward into a future filled with promise and hope.”

LifeSpire of Virginia

LifeSpire of Virginia, formerly Virginia Baptist Homes, operates four unique continuing care retirement communities throughout Virginia: The Culpeper in Culpeper, The Glebe in Daleville, The Chesapeake in Newport News and Lakewood in Richmond. Each community welcomes and supports people of all backgrounds in a faith-based family atmosphere. Though LifeSpire is one family, each community retains a unique sense of identity, a “personality” made of myriad attributes, defining characteristics, and deep connections to local areas.

OUR COMMITMENT

Each community provides a full continuum of care to address the changing health needs of seniors. Readily accessible assisted living, 24-hour nursing care, physical therapy, and memory support services give residents and their loved ones peace of mind, knowing staff is always available to provide excellent services and care.

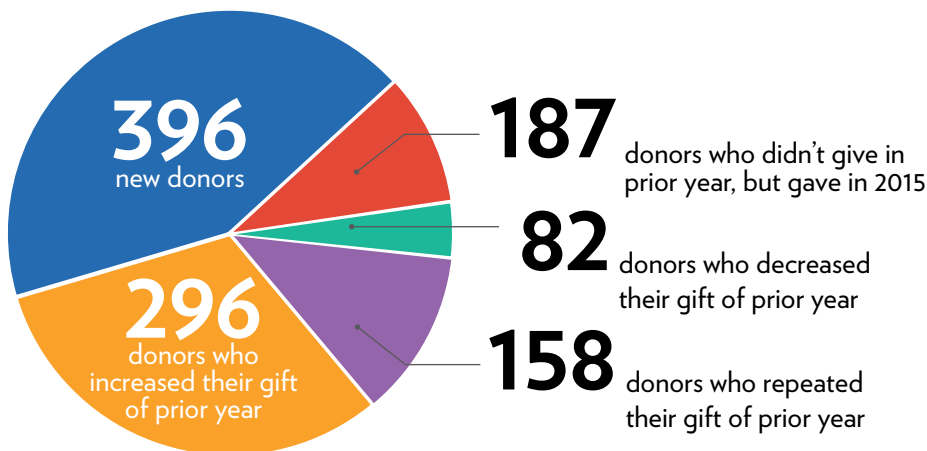

OUR FAITH

Every day, God's love is shared among residents, their families, and our staff. During a time in life when seniors may find themselves without a caring support system, residents of our retirement communities have their bodies, minds, and spirits continually nourished through quality care, faithful service, and a home-like atmosphere.

“Our first priority is service. We put residents first at all times.”

OUR MISSION

Each year, the VBH Foundation raises funds to assist residents who have outlived their resources. Gifts enable residents to remain in their homes and receive care. Residents, individual church members, business partners, Virginia Baptist churches, and the BGAV are among those who give generously to our benevolent ministry.

“We know the benevolent fund helps keep people in their homes. That’s why we make contributions to the VBH Foundation.”

100-year-old Lakewood resident works among Richmond's homeless

Many of the homeless in Richmond's fan district know Buddy Hamilton by name.

"Buddy is a great guy," says Robert Taylor, 60, a weekly guest of the homeless ministry of First Baptist Church, Richmond. "The way he greets people, his personality, I just love Buddy."

"Robert and I have known each other a long time," Hamilton agrees, smiling. The spry centenarian reaches around the taller, younger man to give him a pat on the back.

As a volunteer calls Robert to take his turn in the clothes closet, one of two uniformed police officers patiently answers a young woman's questions. Other guests enjoy coffee and a pastry, waiting their turn for a shower or a snack bag. A few moments before, senior pastor Jim Somerville offered a short sermon. A few heads nodded as the pastor spoke, and some murmured an "Amen" or two. The atmosphere feels like family. Hamilton smiles as he surveys it all.

"This is a sanctuary for them," Hamilton says. "There is no anxiety or fear here. They get to know the police, and the police get to know them. Because of that, they know they are safe."

Hamilton, who celebrated his 100th birthday May 3, volunteers every week in the homeless ministry of the downtown Richmond church, where he has been a member 82 years. He drives himself and two friends, Al Astle, who will be 100 in August, and Jack Mitchell, 90.

TOP: Buddy Hamilton, right, poses with Robert Taylor, 60, at First Baptist Church, Richmond. Taylor is a guest of the church's homeless ministry where Hamilton regularly volunteers.

BOTTOM: Buddy Hamilton signs in a guest of FBC Richmond's homeless ministry for a shower.

Astle and Mitchell also volunteer in the ministry.

"Buddy really takes ownership of the shower ministry," says Vicky Nicholau, who coordinates the ministry as a volunteer. "He's here every Wednesday. The guests love him."

A resident of LifeSpire of Virginia's Lakewood retirement community since 1999, Hamilton was one of LifeSpire's featured trailblazers during Older Americans Month in May. The U.S. Administration for Community Living sets aside May each year to recognize the contributions of older Americans. The 2016 theme was "Blaze a Trail."

“A LifeSpire trailblazer is a resident of one of our communities who models wellness, community and hospitality,” says Jonathan Cook, LifeSpire President and CEO. “We honor and respect Mr. Hamilton for his continuing contributions to our community.”

Hamilton seems to pay little attention to such accolades, but he has a glimmer in his eye when he offers his secret to a long life.

“Pay attention,” Hamilton says. “Listen to what God knows to be best.”

A Lifetime of Honor

Born in 1916 in a house built by his grandfather on Richmond’s Libbie Hill, Hamilton learned to fly when he was 18 years old on a gravel field at Richard E. Byrd flying field (now Richmond International Airport). Later, he was a captain for TWA’s international division in the north and south Atlantic. During World War II, most planes of value to the government were in the hands of commercial airlines, Hamilton explains. As a result, the government conscripted TWA and all other airlines to fly military missions, and TWA’s crews were some of the first to make long-range flights over water during daylight hours.

After the war Hamilton returned to Richmond and rejoined his family’s paper converting business. Eventually, he and his brother, Dick, bought the business from their father and ran it together for nearly 40 years. Hamilton retired in 1998 at age 82.

Throughout his life, Hamilton has also been active in FBC Richmond, where he has taught Sunday School and served as a deacon. He is the last elected “deacon for life,” and the Sunday School class he attends but no longer teaches—called “The Buddy Hamilton class”—is one of the church’s largest.

But balancing his spiritual life and his professional life was often challenging, Hamilton acknowledges.

“For most of my life, I put a lot of effort into my business,” Hamilton says. “I had one foot in the secular world and one foot in the spiritual world.”

“Pay attention,” Hamilton says. “Listen to what God know to be best.”

— Buddy Hamilton

Then, when he was about 55 years old, the then-Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention sponsored a lay renewal weekend at FBC Richmond. During that weekend, Hamilton heard the testimony of a man “who had chosen intentionally to focus on the things of God.”

“I decided I would do the same thing,” Hamilton recalls. “It seems like a small step, but it was life-changing for me.”

Focused on Others

Learning to pay attention to the things of God helped him prioritize and look beyond himself, Hamilton says.

“The real sin of the world is inordinate self-interest,” Hamilton explains. “Every sin can be traced to selfishness that starts at birth. I think this selfishness is wired into us from birth to allow us to survive.

As our parents respond to our cries, we begin to think we are the king,” Hamilton continues. “To overcome this innate selfishness I must be willing to give my thoughts and words to the Lord before they become audible and trigger action.”

Hamilton’s character and spiritual insight are highly respected among those who know him, says Somerville.

“Buddy offers the perspective of years of experience, but he is remarkably open-minded,” Somerville says. “When Buddy speaks, heads swivel to hear what he has to say. People trust him. There is universal recognition that he helped make us who we are.”

In addition to his work in the homeless ministry, Hamilton delivers “Meals on Wheels” monthly to Richmond’s Jackson Ward.

“Some people claim that’s a bad part of town, but I don’t think so,” Hamilton says with a smile. “I have some great friends there.”

Social accountability is the extent to which a non-profit organization is aware of and responds to the needs of the community surrounding it. In 2015, LifeSpire communities provided more than $77,000 in financial support or fees waived to a variety of social accountability causes. Staff donated more than 76,000 paid hours, and residents, staff, and other volunteers gave more than 5,800 hours by participating in community outreach initiatives. Because we have been given much, residents and staff of LifeSpire communities are grateful for the opportunity to give back.

The Culpeper

Be a Santa to a Senior: The Culpeper residents and staff were “Santa to a Senior” to 70 seniors selected through the town's social services department. Partnering with Home Instead Senior Care, participants selected ornaments from a Christmas tree in The Culpeper’s main lobby and purchased and wrapped the gifts for delivery to a lonely, underserved, or forgotten senior in the town of Culpeper.

The Chesapeake

Mount Vernon Elementary Pen Pal Program: Residents of The Chesapeake communicated through letters with second grade students at Mount Vernon Elementary School, and then were able to meet their students.

Lakewood

Henrico County School Supply Challenge: Lakewood residents in Richmond gathered school supplies for their closest neighborhood school, Carver Elementary. Donations included 51 composition books, 27 packages of loose-leaf paper, 31 spiral notebooks, 32 packages of pencils, and the list goes on and on. Eileen Kwak, Lakewood’s Director of Resident Services, thanked residents for their participation. “Children deserve to have access to the school supplies they need to learn, including good books, convenient supplies and the materials necessary to conduct projects and experiments,” Kwak said. “Lakewood residents helped make that possible for the kids at Carver Elementary.”

The Glebe

Ronald McDonald House Charities: The 2015 Ronald McDonald House Charities holiday card cover featured artwork by The Glebe resident, Charlotte Yeatts. Each year, Ronald McDonald House Charities of Southwest Virginia requests holiday card designs from local artists. Submissions are on public display in downtown Roanoke, and winning designs are chosen by popular vote. Winning cards are printed locally and sold each year as a fundraiser for Ronald McDonald House.
